What does it take to get a photograph every day?

- Getting up and around, either inside or out
- Try somewhere new
- Looking, not just “seeing”
- Being adventurous, whimsical and fearless
- Review what you have taken
- Give your image some TLC

How do you begin a 365/52 project? Here are some ready made websites for just that purpose.

365 Project

This is a free site that allows you to simply post any photograph each day. A handy calendar organizer helps you keep track of when and what you have posted. You can choose to follow and make comments on other members posts.

52 Frames

This is also a free site that produces a new prompt each week for members to photograph. You have one week to produce one (and only one) image, which must be taken in that week, for each prompt. There is an album of all images and a selection of “top” images for presentation each week made by the site moderators.
